

Serbian Government adopted the decree on limiting the prices of petroleum products, which refers to petroleum products Euro diesel and Euro premium BMB 95, which will be valid for the next 30 days, namely until 11 April.

The decision was made in order to prevent major disturbances and preserve the living standard of the population, given that in the previous period there was an increase in the prices of petroleum products.

The decree determines the maximum retail price and obliges companies that trade in motor and other fuels at stations for the supply of vehicles, and which until the adoption of the decree delivered petroleum products, to continue with the delivery exclusively by pouring into the fuel tanks.

Also, a decision was made to temporarily reduce excise duties by 20 % of the current amount on oil derivatives - leaded gasoline, unleaded gasoline and gas oils.
